

E. RODRIGUEZ, INC., PETITIONER, VS. THE COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE AND THE COURT OF TAX APPEALS, RESPONDENTS.

G.R. No. L-23041. July 31, 1969

Ponente: BARREDO, J.

Read online (full-text search, related cases, audio case brief): <https://batas.org/library/935ef0f14f6b/>

BARREDO, J.:

This is a petition for review of the decision of the Court of Tax Appeals in its CTA Case No. 849, affirming the decision of the respondent Collector (now Commissioner) of Internal Revenue holding petitioner E. Rodriguez, Inc. liable for deficiency income tax in the sum of P63, 880.00 for the year 1950.

The records of the case show that on July 17, 1948, Congress enacted Republic Act No. 333,[1] pursuant to which the Republic of the Philippines sued the petitioner, among four other defendants, in Civil Case No. Q-54 of the Court of First Instance of Quezon City, for the expropriation of about 1,360,000 square meters of land owned by it and situated within the area delimited' for the new capital city site. After due trial, the said court rendered a decision in the case, dated February 21, 1950, with the following dispositive portion:

"WHEREFORE, judgment is hereby rendered, declaring plaintiff entitled to retain and appropriate the property involved in this proceeding, as site for the development and establishment of the new capital city of the Philippines, in accordance with our condemnation order dated September 19, 1949; and ordering plaintiff to pay defendants, as just compensation for the lands to be taken from them, the following amounts, to wit: to defendant Eulogio Rodriguez, Sr., the sum of THIRTY-NINE THOUSAND SEVEN HUNDRED SEVENTY-SIX PESOS (P39,776. 00); to defendant E. Rodriguez, Inc., the sum of ONE MILLION FOUR HUNDRED EIGHTEEN THOUSAND SIX HUNDRED FOUR (P1,418,604.00) PESOS; to defendant Luzon Investment & Development Co., the sum of FIVE THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED EIGHTY (P5,280.00) PESOS; and to defendants Enrique Manaloto and Canuto G. Manuel, the sum of SIXTEEN THOUSAND SEVEN HUNDRED TWENTY (P16,720. 00) PESOS, with interest at the rate of 67 per annum on the said amounts from September 19, 1949, the date the plaintiff entered upon the possession of the lands in question until payment, plus the costs."

Following the issuance of the above-mentioned decision, however, a series of negotiations were had between petitioner and the Government, represented by the Capital City Planning Commission, after which, the said parties entered into a compromise agreement under date of May 11, 1950, providing, inter alia, as follows:

"(1) That the parties will accept the decision laid down in said case by the Court of First Instance of Rizal (Quezon City Branch) with the following stipulations:

"a. That the defendants mentioned above hereby waive all interest due on the adjudged value of the expropriation properties;

"b. That the defendants above-named hereby donate 207,006 square meters out of Lots Nos. 41-C-3 and 39, object of expropriation in Civil Case No. Q-54;

"c. That defendant Eulogio Rodriguez, Inc. obligates itself to donate as it hereby donates the land object of expropriation in Civil Case No. Q-90, in favor of the Republic of the Philippines, containing an area of 15,200 square meters, which is a portion of Lot No. 41-C-3 as indicated in the plan attached to the complaint therein; said defendant Eulogio Rodriguez, Inc. binding itself to execute the necessary deed of donation thereof;

"d. That defendants named above agree to the payment of the price award-ed by the Court subject to the foregoing stipulations in the total sum of ONE MILLION TWO HUNDRED FIFTY THOUSAND SIX HUNDRED THIRTY-ONE PESOS and EIGHTY CENTAVOS (P1,250,631.80) payable in the following manner:

"1) SIX HUNDRED TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND THREE HUNDRED FIFTEEN PESOS AND NINETY CENTAVOS (P625,315.90) in government bonds in favor of Eu-logio Rodriguez, Sr. and E. Rodriguez, Inc., payable within five (5) years at not less than three percent (3%) per annum;

"2) THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND PESOS (P300,000.00) to be given to the Philip-pine National Bank in payment of the mortgage indebtedness of defendants E. Rodriguez, Sr. and E. Rodriguez, Inc.; and

"3) the balance of THREE HUNDRED TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED FIFTEEN PESOS AND NINETY CENTAVOS (P325,215.90) in cash to be paid to all defendants above named, through Eulogio Rodriguez, Sr., within a reasonable time.

"(2) That after approval of this compromise by the Court, the parties herein agree not to interpose an appeal from the judgment of the Court of First Instance of Rizal (Quezon City Branch) which shall be considered final and executory under the Rules of Court;

"(3) And, finally, that the said parties will submit this compromise agreement to the Court for its approval and/or its consideration in the decision rendered in this case."

This compromise agreement was duly approved by the Court of First Instance of Rizal (Quezon City Branch) on May 12, 1950, and pursuant to the terms thereof, the Government paid to petitioner the sum of P1,238,204.00, of which, P625,315.90 were in Government Bonds.

On March 1, 1951, petitioner filed its income tax return for the year 1950, showing on the face thereof a loss of P17,982.06. In said return, petitioner did not include the sum of P625,315.90 received by it from the government in the form of bonds in payment of its expropriated properties, in the belief that the said amount was free or exempt from taxation. When this return was later examined by an agent of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the Collector of said bureau assessed against petitioner a deficiency income tax of P63, 880.00, computed as follows:

"Net income per return (loss)..... P17,982.06

Amount received for property P1,238,204.00

Less: Cost of Land 827,279.82

Gain P 410,924.18

Undeclared gain 410,924.18

Accounts receivable charged off as bad debts but not forming part of gross income 1,860.00

Miscellaneous expenses not connected with the business 4,450.00

Net Income P399, 252.12

Tax due on P399,252.12 63,880.00"

A series of communications between petitioner and respondent Collector of Internal Revenue followed the foregoing assessment, with the former protesting against and requesting the cancellation of the deficiency income tax assessed against it, and the latter maintaining its accuracy and demanding payment thereof. As petitioner did not pay, on July 6, 1959, the Collector, of Internal Revenue sought the collection of said deficiency income tax of P63, 880.00, plus 5% surcharge and 1% monthly interest thereon from March 11, 1956, by means of an action in the Court of First Instance of Manila.

On June 8, 1960, petitioner offered, by way of compromise, to pay the amount of P30, 676.25 in full settlement of its disputed deficiency income tax liability for 1950. This offer was rejected by the Collector of Internal Revenue; whereupon, under date of June 24, 1960, petitioner filed a petition for review of the assessment in question before the respondent Court of Tax Appeals which, after trial on the merits, rendered its decision affirming the assessment in question. Hence, this appeal by petitioner thru the instant petition for re-view of the said decision of respondent Court of Tax Appeals, with the following assigned errors:

"I. THE RESPONDENT COURT ERRED IN HOLDING THAT THE EXEMPTION CONTEMPLATED BY THE BONDS IN QUESTION APPLIES ONLY TO DOCUMENTARY STAMP TAX AND TAX ON INTEREST DERIVED FROM SUCH BONDS, AND THAT SUCH EXEMPTION CONSTITUTES SUFFICIENT INDUCEMENT FOR PETITIONER TO ACCEPT SAID BONDS.

"II. THE RESPONDENT COURT ERRED IN AFFIRMING THE ORDER OF THE RESPONDENT COLLECTOR HOLDING PETITIONER LIABLE FOR INCOME TAX ON THE EXCHANGE OF ITS PROPERTIES FOR GOVERNMENT TAX-EXEMPT BONDS UNDER REPUBLIC ACT NO. 333."

As petitioner correctly puts it, the only question to decide here is whether or not in determining the profit realized from the payment of the purchase price of its (petitioner's) expropriated property, for income tax purposes, portion of the purchase price paid in the form of tax-exempt bonds issued under Republic Act No. 333 should be included.

The pertinent provisions of law involved are found in Section 9 of the Act abovementioned which reads as follows:

"SEC. 9. The President of the Philippines is authorized to issue, in the name and behalf of the Republic of the Philippines, bonds in an amount of twenty million pesos, the proceeds of which shall be used as a revolving fund for the acquisition of private estates, the subdivision of the area, and the construction of streets, bridges, waterworks, sewerage and other municipal improvements in the Capital City of the Philippines.

"The bonds so authorized to be issued shall bear such date and in such form as the President of the Philippines may determine and shall bear such rate of interest and run for such length of time as may be determined by the President. Both principal and interest shall be payable in Philippine currency or its equivalent in the United States currency, in the discretion of the Secretary of Finance, at the Treasury of the Philippines, and the interest shall be payable at such periods as the President of the Philippines may determine.

"Said bonds shall be exempt from taxation by the Government of the Republic of the Philippines or by any political or municipal subdivisions thereof, which fact shall be stated upon their face, in accordance with this Act, under which the said bonds are issued." [Underscoring supplied]

Petitioner maintains that the portion (paid in tax-exempt Government Bonds) of the profit it derived from the expropriation of its property should not be made subject to income tax, for the reasons that: (1) the Republic of the Philippines gave no concession to petitioner in the compromise agreement involved in this case except that, as testified to by the lawyer who represented petitioner in the negotiations which led to the compromise agreement in question, it was understood between the parties, and it was precisely the only inducement, according to the witness, that made petitioner accept payment of P625,315.90 in Government Bonds instead of cash, that said bonds would be "tax-free"; now, it is argued that by tax-free is meant that by acceptance of the bonds rather than cash, petitioner would not also have to pay income tax on the exchange gain from said bonds;^[2] (2) that the third paragraph of Section 9 of the Act granting tax exemption on bonds issued thereunder was inserted in the law as a further inducement to private land owners within the new capital site to part away with their properties in favor of the Government other than for cash, which legislative history of the law allegedly sustains the position of petitioner; and (3) Congress must have really intended such income tax exemption under Republic Act No. 333 since, similar provisions in Republic Act No. 1400,^[3] likewise involving the expropriation of private estates, expressly declare that the price paid by the Government for the lands acquired for resale to tenants under the authority of said Act (Republic Act No. 1400) shall not be considered as income of the landowner for purposes of the income tax. This reasoning was brushed aside by the respondent Court of Tax Appeals in its decision under review, on the following rationale:

"Petitioner contends that since the Government bonds which it received as part payment of the price of its lot were exempt from taxation, the deficiency assessment made by respondent against it is not in order. On the other hand, respondent claims that the exemption of Government bonds refers only to documentary stamps on the bonds and does not include income tax on the income derived by petitioner which was paid to him in the form of bonds.

"The pertinent portion of Section 9 of Republic Act No. 333, which is the sole basis of petitioner's claim for exemption, provides:

'Said bonds shall be exempt from taxation by the Government of the Republic of the Philippines or by any political or municipal subdivision thereof, which fact shall be stated upon their face, in accordance with this Act, under which the said bonds are issued.'

"There can be no question that petitioner is taxable on its income derived from the sale of its property to the Government. The fact that a portion of the purchase price of the property was paid by the Government in the form of tax exempt bonds does not operate to exempt said income from income tax. The income from the sale of the land in question and the bonds are two different and distinct taxable items so that the exemption of one does not operate to exempt the other, unless the law expressly so provides.

"It is alleged that to deny exemption from income tax on the amount represented by the said bonds would be to nullify the purpose of the law in granting exemption. The question has been asked: If income or gain derived from the acceptance of such bonds in exchange for private estates would be taxed, what inducement did such provision of Republic Act No. 333 give to land owners to accept payment in bonds for their properties in the proposed site of the Capital City? To our mind, there is sufficient inducement, and that is, the exemption not only of the bonds from documentary stamp tax but also of the interest derived from such bonds. Section 29(b) (4) of the National Internal Revenue Code exempts interest derived from such bonds from income tax to the extent provided in the law authorizing the issue thereof.

"Counsel for petitioner also allege that the prevailing rule obtaining in the United States before removal of exemptions of government obligations was to exempt such bonds from income tax both as to principal and interest. To quote from the memorandum of counsel:

‘x x x Actually, most of the Federal Treasury Bonds issued by the U.S. Government from 1921 to 1941, or before the Public Debt Acts of 1941 and 1942 that removed tax exemptions on obligations issued by the United States and its agencies and instrumentalities, were ?

“exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, any State, or any of the possessions of the United States, or by any local taxing authority, except (a) estate or inheritance taxes, and (b) graduated additional income taxes, known as surtaxes, and excess profits and war-profits taxes, now or hereafter imposed by the United States, upon the income or profits of individuals, partnerships, associations, or corporations.” (I Mertens, Law of Federal Income Taxation, pp. 297-313).’ [See page 12, Memorandum of counsel for petitioner, March 20, 1963.]

“Apparently the import of the ruling quoted above from the book of Mertens has not been clearly understood. We think that the exemption referred to therein of both principal and interest has reference to the exemption from income tax of the income derived from the sale or exchange of the bonds and the interest paid by the U.S. Government on such bonds. The opinion quoted from Mertens is inapplicable to the instant case because it does not refer to any income derived by petitioner from the sale or exchange of bonds received by petitioner from the Government under Republic Act No. 333. The tax here involved is on the income derived from the sale of petitioner's property to the Government, not the income derived from the sale or exchange of the bonds.

“Mention has been made of Republic Act No. 1400, Section 22 of which provides that ‘the purchase price paid by the Government for any agricultural land acquired for resale to tenants under the authority of this Act, whether by negotiation or expropriation, shall not be considered as income of the landowner concerned for purposes of the income tax.’ It is argued that since Republic Acts Nos. 333 and 1400 are in pari materia, both should be construed together, and since Republic Act No. 1400 exempts income derived from the sale of property to the Government under said Act, the same exemption should also apply to income derived from the sale of property to the Government under Republic Act No. 333. It is precisely because Republic Act No. 1400 contains an express exemption from income tax of the income derived by property owners from the sale of their lands under said Act and the absence of a similar provision in Republic Act No. 333 which indicates plainly that Congress intended not to grant such exemption to landowners under Republic Act No. 333. If Congress had intended to grant exemption from income tax with respect to income derived by a person from the sale of his property under Republic Act No. 333, it should have expressly made an express provision to that effect as it did in Republic Act No. 1400; that it did not, is a clear indication that its purpose was to withhold such exemption.”

We find no cogent reasons to disturb the above holding of the Court of Tax Appeals. It has been the constant and uniform holding of this Court that exemption from taxation is not favored and is never presumed; in fact, if it is granted, the grant must be strictly construed against the taxpayer.[4] Affirmatively put, the law requires courts to frown on alleged exemptions from taxation, hence, an exempting provision in a legislative enactment should be construed in strictissimi juris[5] against the taxpayer and liberally in favor of the taxing authority.[6] This Court has been most consistent in this holding. In Asiatic Petroleum Co. vs. Llanes,[7] it was explained beyond any possibility of miscomprehension that:

“x x x Exemptions from taxation are highly disfavored, so much so that they may almost be said to be odious to the law. He who claims an exemption must be able to point to some positive provision of law creating the right. It cannot be allowed to exist upon a vague implication x x x. The books are full of very strong expressions on this point. As was said by the Supreme Court of Tennessee in Memphis vs. U. & P. Bank (91 Tenn., 546, 550), ‘The right of taxation is inherent in the State. It is a prerogative essential to the perpetuity of the government; and he who claims an exemption from the common burden, must justify his claim by the clearest grant of organic or statute law.’ Other utterances equally or more emphatic come readily to hand from the highest authority. In Ohio Life Ins. and Trust Co. vs. Debolt (16 Howard, 416), it was said by Chief Justice Taney, that the right of taxation will not be held to have been surrendered, 'unless the intention to surrender is manifested by words too plain to be mistaken.' In the case of the Delaware Railroad Tax (18 Wallace, 206, 226), the Supreme Court of the United States said that the surrender, when claimed, must be shown by clear, unambiguous language, which will admit of no reasonable construction consistent with the reservation of the power. If a doubt arise as to the intent of the legislature, that doubt must be resolved in favor of the State. In Erie Railway Company vs. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (21 Wallace, 492, 499), Mr. Justice Hunt, speaking of exemptions, observed that a State cannot strip itself of the most essential power of taxation by doubtful words. 'It cannot, by ambiguous language, be deprived of this highest attribute of sovereignty.' In Tennessee vs. Whitworth (117 U.S., 129, 136), it was said: 'In all cases of this kind the question is as to the intent of the legislature, the presumption always being against any surrender of the taxing power.' In Farrington vs. Tennessee and County of Shelby (95 U.S. 679, 685), Mr. Justice Swayne said: "x x x When exemption is claimed, it must be shown indubitably to exist. At the outset, every presumption is against it. A well-founded doubt is fatal to the claim. It is only when the terms of the concession are too explicit to admit fairly of any other construction that the proposition can be supported."

The above rules should be applied to the case at bar where the law invoked (Section 9 of Republic Act No. 333) does not make any reference whatsoever to exemption of income derived from the sale of expropriated property thereunder, unlike under Republic Act No. 1400 where, re-lative to the price paid by the Government for any agricultural land acquired for resale to tenants, there is an express declaration that the same "shall not be considered as income of the landowner concerned for purposes of the income tax." Nor are We convinced by the argument that the particular provision of Republic Act No. 333 relied upon which grants exemption on bonds issued thereunder for purposes of inducement to private land owners within the new capital site to part away with their properties in favor of the Government other than for cash should be taken to mean that said property owners need not pay income tax on their income derived from the sale of such properties. The pertinent Congressional Record of the proceedings held during the consideration of the bill which later became Republic Act No. 333,[8] does not show that Congress had intended to exempt said property owners from the payment of income tax on the proceeds of the sale of their properties when the same is paid in government bonds issued under the said law. Likewise, even were We to assume, for the sake of argument, that the Capitol City Planning Commission and other officials of the government did make some assurance or promise to herein petitioner that the portion of the price of its expropriated property paid in tax-exempt government bonds would not be made subject to income tax payment, such assurance or promise, made without statutory sanction, cannot bind the Government. The same amounts to a surrender of the State's power to require payment of income tax, which in this case is not explicitly granted by Republic Act No. 333. It is a well-known rule that erroneous application and enforcement of the law by public officers do not block subsequent correct application of the statute,[9] and that the Government is never estopped by mistake or error on the part of its agents.[10] In the present circumstances, the Collector of Internal Revenue is right in assessing against petitioner the deficiency income tax in question, consonant with the proposition that income from expro-priation proceedings is income from sales or exchange and therefore taxable.[11]

FOR THE FOREGOING CONSIDERATIONS, the decision of the Court of Tax Appeals under review is affirmed, with costs against herein petitioner.

Concepcion, C.J., Dizon, Sanchez, Castro, Fernando and Teehankee, JJ., concur.
Reyes, J.B.L., Makalintal, Zaldivar and Capistrano, JJ., took no part.

[1] An Act to establish the capital of the Philippines and the permanent seat of the National Government, to create a Capital City Planning Commission, to appropriate funds for the acquisition of private estates within the boundary limits of said city, and to authorize the issuance of bonds of the National Government for the acquisition of private estates, for the subdivision thereof, and for the construction of streets, bridges, waterworks, sewerage and other municipal improvements in the said capital city.

[2] Per testimony of Atty. Jose A. Garcia, TSN, pp. 31-353.

[3] Section 22 of Republic Act No. 1400, relied upon, reads:

"SEC. 22. Exemption from tax.- All land certificates issued by authority of this Act shall be exempt from all forms of taxes. The purchase price paid by the Government for any agricultural land acquired for resale to tenants under the authority of this Act, whether through negotiation or expropriation, shall not be considered as income of the landowner concerned for purposes of the income tax."

[4] See Commissioner of Internal Revenue vs. Guerrero, L-20812, Sept. 22, 1967. 21 SCRA 180, 183, and the numerous cases therein cited.

[5] Id., citing Philippine Guaranty Co. vs. Commissioner, L-22074, Sept. 6, 1965.

[6] Esso Standard Eastern, Inc. vs. Actg. Commissioner of Customs, L-21841, Oct. 28, 1966, 18 SCRA 488, citing cases.

[7] 49 Phil. 466, 471.

[8] Consideration of House Bill No. 2003, Congressional Record, House of Representatives, Vol. III, Nos. 1-9, June 14-24, 1948, p. 323, et seq.

[9] Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. vs. Collector of Internal Revenue, 90 Phil. 674, 680; Republic vs. Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company, L-18841, January 27, 1969, 26 SCRA 620, 631.

[10] Pineda vs. Court of First Instance of Tayabas, 52 Phil. 803, 807; Benguet Consolidated Mining Company vs. Pineda, 98 Phil. 711, 724; Central Azucarera de Tarlac vs. Collector, et al., 104 Phil. 653, 656; Philippine American Drug Co. vs. Collector of Internal Revenue, et al., 106 Phil. 161, 168; Koppel (Phil.) Inc. vs. Collector of Internal Revenue, L-10550, September 19, 1961; Luzon Stevedoring Corporation vs. Court of Tax Appeals, L-21005, October 22, 1966, 18 SCRA 436, 440; Tan Guan vs. Court of Tax Appeals, L-23676, April 27, 1967, 19 SCRA 903, 907; Republic vs. Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. supra.

[11] Gutierrez, et al. vs. Court of Tax Appeals, 101 Phil. 713, 722.

ABOUT BATAS.ORG

Study smarter at BATAS.org

The Philippine bar review and law-school companion built around how your brain actually remembers.

The complete Philippine law library - free for everyone.

More than 100,000 Supreme Court decisions, Republic Acts, and executive issuances - full-text searchable, browsable by category and year, and always free. No paywall, no login. This PDF came from it.

Audio case-brief lectures.

Any decision becomes a podcast-style lecture - facts, issues, ruling, and doctrine - with read-along highlighting and a hands-free presentation mode. Study while commuting, working out, or resting your eyes.

Bar review built on the science of memory.

Complete, sequenced courses for all eight bar subjects, narrated like podcasts and reinforced with retrieval practice and spaced review - the study techniques with the strongest evidence behind them.

The full law-school curriculum.

One subscription unlocks the entire J.D. curriculum - every subject, every lesson, with your progress tracked down to the paragraph so you can pick up exactly where you left off, on any device.

Mock exams that tell you where you stand.

Timed multiple-choice exams graded instantly, with per-subject score breakdowns and focus suggestions that point you at your weakest topics first.

A study planner that keeps you on pace.

Set your schedule and BATAS tells you every day whether you are on track for bar day - and exactly which lesson to take next.

Start free at <https://batas.org>

The law library is free forever - and your first lesson is one click away.

The text of this document is an official public record and remains in the public domain. Formatting, presentation, and compilation © 2026 batas.org.

Downloaded free from the batas.org Law Library. Share it freely - the library is free for every law student, bar reviewee, and practitioner.