I

Rationale

Foster family care is considered the best substitute parental arrangement for children in need of temporary care due to abandonment, neglect and abuse. The child is placed for a planned period of time to a licensed foster family and has its goal, the return or the reunification of the child with his/her biological family or relatives.

There are, however, instances where the child stays with his/her foster family for more than the planned period and sometimes even more than a year. The reasons may be any of the following:

- Difficulty in locating the child's biological family
- The long process of declaring the child abandoned in court
- Difficulty in placing the child for adoption due to the child's age, sex or special needs In view of the child's prolonged stay, a foster family may apply to adopt their foster child to provide him/her a permanent family. Thus, the need for this guidelines.
